HANDS OFF POLICY IS BORAH'S ADVICE

JAP GOVERNMENT ORDERS FOUR DESTROYERS TO CHINA

Washington Is Uneasy Over the State of Affairs In China—the President or His Cabinet Have Not Taken Up the Matter—Message of Charge Mayer.

Anti-foreign agitation in the Canton vicinity is causing uneasiness in that place and nearby cities, Consul General Jenkins informed the state department.

"During a student demonstration in Wuchow, on June 8, a mob yelled 'kill foreigners' and threw stones at the American Baptist hospital," the message said.

The consul is continuing to urge Americans to leave the Canton region for Hongkong and other safe places.

A report from Charge Ferdinand Mayer at Peking that representatives of the Chinese student group concerned in the Shanghai incidents had requested American assistance in seeing that justice was done in that case, inclined officials to increased hopefulness that the anti-foreign outbreak would not develop into a movement which threatened American lives.

There was no word available, either at the White House or state department, to show that the Chinese situation had engaged the attention of the cabinet extensively at its meeting today.

In the absence of direct word from cabinet circles a telegram made public by Chairman William E. Borah, of the Senate Foreign Relations committee, declaring he favored "withdrawal of extra territorial rights in China as speedily as practicable," took on special significance.

The telegram, which was a reply to a protest from an American citizen whose name the senator did not disclose, stated that, serious as the situation in China might be, it did not arise from "acts or promises of the United States" and that he saw no reason why the Washington government should be drawn into controversies of other powers or with the Chinese authorities or people.

Mr. Borah's attitude was regarded in certain quarters as representing views of the administration, based upon developments up to this time that the United States and its nationals in China were not directly involved in the present disturbance and were not likely to be unless the student protest movement against foreign extra territorial rights should get out of hand.

The report from Charge Mayer at Peking on the demonstration there June 15, in which 15,000 workers and students took part, brought out the destructive rather than constructive nature of the student propaganda.

The demonstration was peaceful, being conducted under the eyes of troops specially brought into the city by the Provisional government to insure foreigners against attack, but the demands made by the demonstrators showed that they contemplated merely withdrawal of extra territorial stipulations.

Mr. Mayer's message quoted these demands as follows:

- "1. To sever relations with England.
- "2. To send troops for the purpose of protecting the Chinese merchants in the foreign concessions at Hankow.
- "3. To circularize all the provinces by telegram to organize a national relief army."

Columbus, O., June 16—Employees of state institutions will be getting their salary increases shortly. The allowance made by the legislature will be distributed as equally as possible, John Harper, state welfare director, said.

ROY STRAWSER BRINGS SUIT FOR INJURIES

Norfolk and Western Defendant in $50,000 Case—Accident at Ritt's Crossing.

Two damage suits for $50,000 each were filed in federal court Monday morning against railroads.

Roy Strawser asks for this sum for injuries received when he was injured while working on a Norfolk & Western railroad bridge about four and one-half miles north of Circleville.

In his petition he declares that he was ordered under a railroad car crane while working on a bridge abutment at location, to make repairs, and that the crane man in some manner released the crane which started down the track. He lists his injuries as crushed leg, fractured skull, an eye injury and declares that they are permanent. The accident happened on December 30, 1924.—Columbus Dispatch

BOYS AND GIRLS ARE TO VISIT CAPITAL CITY

Club Tour Will be Made July 9—Dinner on the State University Campus.

Parents who go on the Pickaway County Boys' and Girls' Club tour will in most cases enter the Ohio penitentiary for the first time.

Each township is making arrangements for its own transportation and meal. Several township Farm Bureau chairmen appointed committees to work with the club leaders in organizing their townships. Township chairmen who have not appointed such a committee will do so within the next week.

All machines will meet at the "Pen" at 8 o'clock Thursday, July 9. Cars can be parked on the first street west of the penitentiary.

Warden Thomas has consented to take the party thru in lots of one hundred each. It is very important that each township arrive at the appointed hour, eight o'clock.

The tourists upon leaving the penitentiary, will drive north to the Ohio State University campus. The picnic dinners will be eaten on the campus grounds just south of the library. Each township will provide for one or two extra, as some of the University faculty always enjoy eating a good farm dinner with real live Buckeyes.

Dean Alfred Vivian and Senator C. C. Chapplear will give short talks at the close of the meal.

A tour to various points of interest on the campus and will follow the speaking. The stadium, flower gardens, museum, university barns and many other interesting places will be visited. The plans are to start home by 4 o'clock.

The club boys and girls are especially anxious to attend to help make their club grade high at Pumpkin Show time.

FARM BUREAU NEWS WRITERS GET POINTERS

Representatives From Ten Townships Attend—Will Print Best Article.

The publicity work of the Farm Bureau was given the once over to representatives from ten townships. The work was explained by Agent J. D. Bragg and A. P. Wald, of the Farm Bureau, conducted the meeting Tuesday afternoon at the office of the Farm Bureau.

The object of the meeting was to teach a class of girls how to get a news article for newspapers pertaining to the farm and the raising of crops, poultry, stock and everything about the farm of any interest. The publicity is a feature that all enterprises are going into to advertise what they are doing and the news writing end, has to be learned and cultivated.

Newspapers demand that you write your copy on one side of the sheet only, that the article should be started at least from two to three inches from the top in order that the editor has space to place a head on the article. Another thing that you should follow in news writing, is to start out right. Double space for typewritten articles and triple space your lines if it is in your own hand writing. This must be done in order to have your copy edited properly and also to give the editor a chance to correct by writing between the lines. Punctuation, capitalization and spelling are all gone over before your copy reaches the compositor or linotypist.

In starting to write up a piece of news for the Farm Bureau or a newspaper or magazine, start out with the description of the subject in your first paragraph. Follow with time and place and do not fail to do this as it localizes your article. Then without repetition, tell your story in your own language in as concrete a form as possible. Do not fail to give the interesting part of the article a little local color, but do not draw on your imagination too freely, as it will spoil the article and make it worthless as a news.

Something unique, new or novel, something out of the ordinary is the thing readers of papers desire. It need not be sensational and it must be as nearly accurate as possible.

The idea is to give publicity to township meetings for county offices and for projects going on in the various townships.

What news is, where to find it, methods of reporting how to prepare news and how to write it were thoroughly gone over by the speakers. Each one present wrote a news article on the poultry calendar records for May. These were judged and the best article will appear in the county paper.

Gloves, Hose, Fans, Scarfs, to Match

Rage for Ensemble Idea in General Reaches to All Accessories.

Among the most intriguing glove novelties are the mousquetaire in bright colors—rose, yellow, absinthe, turquoise. They are reminders of the styles chronicled long ago, but not seen in many years. With the rage of the ensemble idea in general, there are stockings and shoes, scarfs and fans to match the new prettily colored gloves. The craze for embroidered cuffs and linings and stitched exteriors has inspired some most attractive novelties. Most of the late styles in gauntlets have cuffs lined with gay plaid or figured silk, and are embroidered in flowers or figures, all in bright colors. The newest gloves have also a bright silk stitching on the back and the seams are overstitched in the same shade. It is unusual to see a glove of the new style with the cuff worn otherwise than inside out, as it were.

The craze for flower trimming, garnitures and fabric-made flowers has stimulated many original designs, and the more important shops are giving conspicuous place to many lovely things in these floral novelties. The single blossoms or sprays that contain one full-blown flower, a bud and two or three leaves are made of silk, velvet, batiste or metal tissue. Enormous roses, lilies, trumpet flowers, poppies, are fashioned out of taffeta, used double, each petal of two shades, hand-sewn and wired between the layers to give it a natural shape. The buds and leaves are made in the same manner and all are attached to a flexible silk or chenille-covered stem. Big, luscious pansies are made in velvet shading from deep purple to pale lilac and in the dull reds and yellows that are found in garden flower beds.

Water lilies are marvelously reproduced in white taffeta, and the round yellow variety is made to look like the real article with organdie, tinted with water colors. The pads are done in green silk, cleverly veined and wired, and long stems are of rubber and silk. A great variety of poppies and other large flowers in silk and velvet are stitched with flosses, and some, particularly those done in black velvet, are showily outlined with rhinestones. Almost every flower grown is reproduced in this fabric version, somewhat nouveau in its art, to be sure, but decorative. Sweet peas, vicia blossoms, violets, nasturtiums, delphinium and snapdragons, gaudily painted in their true colors, are all most cleverly done. A homely intriguing novelty is the little posy and spray of leaves crocheted with colored yarns.

Subtlety of Coloring; Marked Individuality

The new prints, as shown in the mode, have proved their adaptability to the simple smart modes of the present season. In this frock distinction of line is accentuated by the harmonious coloring of a print used in combination with a plain silk.

Contrast in Fabric and Color of New Millinery

Contrast in texture as well as in coloring that is achieved by the use of materials of varied character is exemplified in the new hats for early summer. These feature novel ways of combining velvet and straw. Besides being bound and faced with velvet, many have crowns made entirely of the fabric draped in flattering lines.

Wide-brimmed hats frequently have a full crown of velvet with a brim of straw, or the order is reversed and a soft gathered or shirred brim of velvet is attached to a crown of straw. On black hats of this type ink roses or yellow water lilies add a bit of color.

A System of Farming That Brings Health and Prosperity

Every farm, regardless of the method of farming practiced or of the crops raised, should have at least a few good milch cows to provide

- (1) Enough milk, cream and butter for home use;
- (2) Enough skim-milk to raise some calves, pigs and chickens;
- (3) Enough cream or butter to sell to pay, in part or entirely, current living expenses.

This plan has been a "life-saver" for thousands of farmers, especially during the hard times of the past two years. It insures a living, at least, and often other income besides.

Such a plan pays best with a De Laval Cream Separator. It soon pays for itself—and skims cleaner, lasts longer and is easier to operate and clean than any other.

TIMELY WARNING TO CARELESS MOTORIST

Above is shown an impressive sign, the purpose of which is to warn reckless motorists, and which has been placed at the head of St. Charles avenue, the main thoroughfare in New Orleans. The daily toll of killed and injured by auto is registered on the sign.

JAYWALKER WILL CAUSE TROUBLE

His One Ambition in Life Seems to Be a Desire to Be Run Over.

No law-abiding citizen can drive an automobile for more than a week without introduction to the Jaywalker. He may step unexpectedly into the path of your car from nowhere; he may be crossing the street aimlessly in a trance; or he may stop suddenly in the midst of traffic to adjust a shoe. His one ambition in life is to be run over violently and you are bound to meet him eventually.

Then the steering wheel will be thrown wildly to one side, plunging nearby cars into dangerous confusion and narrowly missing the Jaywalker who usually skips away with a merry "Ha, Ha," indicating his jocular interpretation of the incident.

Cause of Trouble.

If, by any chance, the Jaywalker outwits the driver and manages to get plastered all over the pavement, there's trouble at hand. Both parties have an equal right to the street in the eyes of the law and romantic bandages have a far greater sympathetic appeal to the court than the common sense, but intact, appearance of the car owner—the comparison is seldom representative of the circumstances attending the accident. Cases are on record where His Honor did not award damages to the Jaywalker, but they are few and far between. In other words, if your car collides forcibly with a member of this peculiar species, it is liable to cause plenty of trouble and cost perfectly good money.

Eternal Vigilance.

Now, having come to the conclusion that the motorist is better off if he does not hit the Jaywalker, what is to be done about it? Unfortunately there is no other remedy than eternal vigilance. Even on a country road, deserted save for one lone pedestrian, be careful. He may be a Jaywalker who will stoop in front of your car to pluck a daisy just as you draw abreast of him.

Until all persons with these irritating tendencies are tied to the sidewalks, surrounded by a twelve-foot fence or hung, the Jaywalker will haunt us. Expect him—outwit him—refuse to kill him—thus keeping out of trouble and the courts by bearing the entire burden yourself, unfair as it may seem.

Plan to Save Gasoline Is Told by an Engineer

About ninety-nine drivers out of a hundred are wasteful of gasoline, according to an engineer, who cites a number of ways the fuel may be conserved, both for the general good and as a matter of economy for the owner. Here they are:

Carburetor adjustment is of prime importance. A mixture that is too rich or too lean will cause more gasoline to be used in performing a given amount of labor than a correct mixture. But don't attempt to adjust your carburetor unless you know how.

Most cars have what may be termed an economical speed. It ranges from twelve to twenty miles per hour. When you get above that speed, the amount of gas used per mile increases.

Anticipate slowing up and stops. Close the throttle and disengage the clutch far enough ahead of the place you want to stop so that very little use of the brake will be necessary. Whenever you use the brakes you destroy the momentum that has required gasoline to create.

Accelerate gradually. It takes less gas to do that than to reach a fast gait quickly.

Whenever you allow the engine to run with the car standing, you are using up gas that doesn't make any showing on your odometer.

Hook for Applying Auto Chains Very Convenient

Auto chains can readily be applied with a hook of the kind shown in the illustration. The hook is made from a length of steel rod, bent as indicated. In use, it is placed over one of the wheel spokes and the second link of the chain are slipped over the bent ends, so that when the car is driven forward, the chain is pulled on the tire. Where the chain comes in contact with the road directly under the tire, the cross links retard the movement, while the hook pulls the chain taut. The first links are then fastened to the opposite ends of the chain, or if this is too loose, the second links are used after the hook has been removed.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Help Reduce Accidents by Driving Carefully

You will help reduce accidents if you:

Don't cut corners.

Give the proper signal whenever your action in starting from the curb, in turning, in changing your course or in stopping may reasonably be said to affect other traffic.

Don't consider driving at maximum speed within the law—the legal speed is a safe speed at all times.

Don't turn except at corners in business districts and close, built-up sections.

Don't pass street cars discharging passengers.

Don't attempt to pass a vehicle if there is another vehicle approaching from the opposite direction unless the road is clear for one hundred yards.

Don't drive your car out of the garage without knowing your brakes and steering gear are tight and your headlights comply with the law.

Slow down when you observe children playing near the curb or in the street. Remember, they have not the wisdom of an adult.

Don't drive with the belief that the pedestrian is familiar with road rules.

Keep Sweet

"Suppose you look at the world through a yellow pane of glass," said the late beloved Doctor Jowett. "Why, then you have a yellow world. Suppose you look through a dirty pane of glass. Why, then everything is defiled. Suppose you look at everything through the yellow pane of jealousy, or the red pane of envy—why, then you disfigure everything. And if you look at things through a soured disposition you will not see anything that is lovely or sweet. The cynical heart has a charmless world."

Positive Identification

C. S. Collins, superintendent of the identification bureau of Scotland Yard, who has made nearly 500,000 finger prints of criminals and suspects, retired recently after 30 years' service in the London police department. From the finger prints on file in Mr. Collins' department some 200,000 identifications have been made, according to authorities, without a single mistake. "I would stake my life on the probability that there never will be finger prints alike, even if the world goes on indefinitely," Mr. Collins said recently, in speaking of his work. During the next generation, he asserted, finger prints would be much more generally used everywhere, not only in the identification of criminals, but as a matter of record in births, and numerous other directions.

FORMER SAFETY DIRECTOR

Edward E. Curtis of Canton Lost
Appeal to Ohio Supreme Court.

Columbus, June 16.—(UP.)—E. E. Curtis, former Canton, O., safety director, today lost his appeal to the supreme court.

The high tribunal affirmed the judgment of the lower court which found against Curtis in Stark county where he was ousted as safety director for alleged corrupt practices, bribery. This means that Curtis must serve a sentence of three years in the Ohio Penitentiary.

Going further into the case, in a review, touching on the question of accomplices, the opinion says that "where in a prosecution for crime, persons alleged to be accomplices of the defendant have testified in behalf of the state, it is not error for the court to refuse to instruct the jury that they are in fact accomplices, but the court should define an accomplice and leave it to the jury to determine whether or not the witness is an accomplice."

Sweeping decision of the four judges concurring in the finding that there was no prejudicial error in the lower courts, and that the judgment of the lower courts "must be affirmed," sweeps away the bridge over which the defendant hoped to pass in escaping the sentence of the lower court that he serve a term in the penitentiary.

Ominous

"I've been studying a good deal about resigning my office," declared Constable Sam T. Slackpitter, the guardian of the peace and dignity of Petunia. "It's getting too ominous." "Too-what?" returned Mayor Numbers. "Ominous—or dangerous, if you like that better. You know the new shooting gallery that opened up last week? Well, I've seen no less than eight women, all told, practicing shooting there. It may mean nothing, and it may not; but—"—Kansas City Times

ROME SUFFERS SINKING SPELLS

Series of Collapses of Streets Causes Alarm.

Rome.—Despite the reassuring statements and glib explanations which have been made by the Roman municipal authorities of an unusual series of street collapses and cave-ins, the fact that six of these disquieting accidents have occurred within the brief space of several weeks is causing considerable alarm here.

The first of these accidents was a cave-in which caused a large section of the Via Ripetta to fall to a depth of about six feet. The collapse occurred in broad daylight, the ground falling away several feet in front of a crowded tramway. But the proximity of the Via Ripetta to the Tiber river offered the apparent explanation that the recent heavy rains and flood condition of the river had caused a weakening of the alluvial subsoil along the river bank.

Within a fortnight after this collapse, however, there were five other more or less similar accidents in various sections of the city, some of them far from the river and the Romans, always ready to inject melodrama into the simple facts of daily existence, saw in the series the presentation of a new source of terror. The inhabitants of southern Italy and Sicily live under the Damocletian sword of the ever-present prospect of telluric disturbances; would the Romans have to live in constant dread of the possible effects of a crumbling subsoil?

To this question the authorities have hastened to give an emphatic negation, asserting that each accident had a special cause and that there was no one underlying cause for all of them. In some places, it is explained, too much new construction was weakening the subsoil; in others, rain-water seepage had caused weakness, while in still others excavations for building foundations had unearthed ancient sewage systems.

Remaining Vacant Tribal Indian Lands to Be Sold

Washington.—For the purpose of concluding the tribal affairs of the Choctaw, Chickasaw, Cherokee, and Creek Indian nations of Oklahoma the Secretary of the Interior has authorized the sale of the remaining vacant tribal lands and town lots belonging to these Indians.

There are 438 tracts of unallotted timber and segregated land and 95 town lots to be offered for sale. Most of them have been sold previously, but the purchasers have forfeited them through failure to make payments.

The secretary authorized the superintendent of the Five Civilized Tribes with headquarters at Muskogee to conduct auction sales for the disposition of the tracts of lands and town lots. They are to be sold without regard to valuation to the highest bidder.

The sale will be held at certain railroad points in eastern Oklahoma from July 13 to July 18, 1925. Terms of the sale will be 25 per cent cash, the balance in three equal annual installments payable in one, two, and three years with interest at 5 per cent per year. No limitations as to the number of acres and lots any one person may purchase has been made.

Receipts from the sale of the 438 tracts of land and 95 town lots will be placed in the tribal funds of these Indians to be distributed to them with the final settlement of their affairs.

U. S. Shoe Sales Average Same as 25 Years Ago

Santa Barbara, Cal.—Americans are wearing no more shoes than they were wearing 25 years ago, regardless of extravagances in other directions, John G. McKeon of Philadelphia, president of the National Foot and Shoe Manufacturers' association, said in speaking before the annual convention of the California Shoe Retailers' association in session here. "People were buying three pairs of shoes a year a quarter of a century ago and they are still buying three pairs a year," he asserted.

SEWING CLUB SESSIONS AT DARBYVILLE

Interesting Program Rendered
by Members—Design for Club Pin Adopted.

June 2, the Buckeye Sewing club held its regular meeting at the home of the leader, Mrs. J. N. McKinley, and the session was called to order by the president, Violet Ginder.

The roll call was answered by telling "One way to better the club." The suggestions made were as follows: Cora Bussert, "No slander or gossip of club members;" Louise Carpenter, "Regular attendance;" Violet Ginder, "More sociability;" Blanche Heeter, "Pay dues regularly;" Christena Heeter, "To agree quickly;" Dorothy Hill, "Demonstrating team;" Florence Hill, "Pay dues regularly;" Pauline Fullon, "No hard feelings."

Two new members were received, Florence Hill and Pauline Fuller. Florence will take the first year work and Pauline the second year along with Violet Ginder.

The club pins will be round, gold and blue, with the initials "B. S. C." Buckeye Sewing Club.

The constitution and by-laws were adopted and the members practiced stitches. Some of them were even and uneven, basting overcast and running. All showed talent, but Violet Ginder and Christian Heeter both had very nearly a perfect running stitch.

After an hour of sewing, all were entertained by the social committee, Christena Heeter and Louise Carpenter. They gave some "peppy" songs and yells. Then each member put on a stunt and a most enjoyable program was rendered. Refreshments of sandwiches, cake and orangeade were served by the committee.

THAT MEXICAN CASE

Washington, June 16.—(UP.)—President Coolidge gave his consent to the issuance of the Kellogg statement only after he had been informed that there was no other way to bring the Mexican government to a realization that this country would no longer tolerate disrespect to its representative and to American diplomatic approaches.

The origin of the American move as told to the United Press follows:

"For weeks Ambassador Sheffield had thought that there was a growing lack of respect for the United States on the part of the Mexican government. Many of his notes to the foreign office went unanswered. There were several seizures of American land, notably one by the Mexican government itself.

"Sheffield protested but apparently to no avail. He then came to Washington and laid the situation before Mr. Coolidge and Kellogg. He demanded, according to the story, that this government make an open statement to Calles so that the Mexican and American people would know that this government was displeased. In this way only, he argued, could pressure be brought on the Mexican government for the desired results."

The Circleville Eagle team, accompanied by a large crowd of rooters, journeyed to Wilmington Sunday, and got ample revenge for the defeat here at the hands of Wilmington a week ago.

Hard hitting characterized the game Sunday, four home runs, one triple and a flock of singles being garnered during the course of the contest.

Hironamous was not so fortunate as on the previous Sunday, and when the smoke had cleared away Circleville had collected fifteen safe blows from his delivery, the most of them clean, hard hits, and two going for home runs.

Dewey had only one really bad inning, the second, when the home team gave him a terrific bombardment, a home run, a double and three singles following each other in order. The Wilmington team batted around this inning, scoring three runs and having three men on bases when Pettit caught Davis' fly for the final out.

Pettit, who was moved over to left for this game, had a strenuous day of it, catching six fly balls and chasing three others that were hit out of his reach. Several of his catches were on the circus order, and his work made quite an impression on the home fans.

Schilders who played center field, caught the only ball hit to him, and at bat made one safe hit.

Tommy Thompson was one of the big noises of the game; playing with a broken finger sustained the week previous, he handled three ground balls in faultless style, and at bat made three safe hits, two of which drove in runs.

Pettit also made three hits, one of which netted him a home run when it bounced over the left fielder's head.

McGrainer was also back hitting his stride, getting a home run, single and base on balls in five trips to the plate and hitting another to first base so fast that it might have been termed a hit rather than an error for Dodds.

Circleville started the game with a rush, putting over three runs in the first and two in the second and were never headed by the home team although the score was six to five at the end of the sixth inning.

On next Sunday Circleville will play at Washington and if they can win the contest will go into a tie with Washington for first place. If they lose they will be in a tie for the cellar position with the team that loses the Wilmington-London bout.

AMUSEMENTS

Popular acclaim was responsible for placing Alice Terry and Conway Tearle in the roles of Ruth Jordan and Stephen Ghent in "The Great Divide" the Metro-Goldwyn screen version of William Vaughn Moody's famous Arizona romance which comes to the Metropolitan theater today.

Suggestions from the public and from dramatic critics thruout the United States, solicited by the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio after film rights to the famous play had been acquired, named Mr. Tearle and Miss Terry the ideal pair for the star parts in "The Great Divide."

Almost every leading man and woman in motion pictures was put forward, but the names of Alice Terry and Conway Tearle led those of the other candidates by a wide margin. Other prominent players in the cast include Wallace Beery, ZaSu Pitts, Huntly Gordon, Allan Forrest, Ford Sterling, William Orlamond and George Cooper. Waldemar Young prepared the adaptation.

Books—Old and Rare.

Imprints, the searcher for rare books must be able to recognize one when he sees it. As few people possess the expert knowledge which enables them to recognize, in a pile of books, what is valuable and what is not, it is advisable and generally profitable, to secure expert advice before disposing of any considerable collection of old books. Nor is it well to expect, as the shrewd old Yankee proverb puts it, that there is a bass under every lily-pod. In most old attics in New England there are collections, large or small, of aged books. The chances are that they are valuable only as waste paper; yet again, they hold the chance of a find.

In 1649 there appeared in a sheet called Moderate the first-known English newspaper advertisement. It was an inquiry for a stolen horse and the offer of a reward for its return.

UNIVERSITY IMPORTANCE

By MISS EVA ARONSON

(Copyright, 1924, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"PEOPLE who have never been to college cannot be said to be well-educated," stated Buddie, with the conviction of a man of the world.

And why not? Buddie was just sixteen and this was his first year at college. Who was more competent to give an opinion on any subject under the sun than Buddie?

"I suppose that finishes me," Helen, his cousin, said with a laugh. "I have never been to college. I might aim to be a college professor's wife, though," she added, with a twinkle in her eye.
"Surely that would be a college education in itself."

"Huh!" grunted Bud, and almost choked over a mouthful of lemon pie.
"As if any prof would have you?"

"Why not?" Helen demanded, slightly discomfited. "I am not bad-looking, and I—"

"But you are not well educated," Buddie interrupted crushingly. "You read a lot, it is true, but you couldn't talk coherently on any subject."

"How do you like your teachers?"
interposed his father, seeing that Helen was flushing uncomfortably.

"Teachers—old sap-heads!" said Buddie, wrinkling his nose. "Especially Loverly, the prof in psychology."

"Is it quite dignified to call your professor Loverly?" inquired his father, respectfully.

"Oh, you don't understand, father!"—
Buddie looked immeasurably bored—
"because you have never been to college. The profs know they are called Loverly and Kippy and Mittens, but they pretend they don't know. They feel awfully flattered to be nicknamed by the students."

"I suppose the professors don't count," said Helen resentfully. "You talk as though nobody counts but you."

"Well, they don't count," said Buddie promptly. "Now, take this Loverly.
He doesn't know how to lecture. I could lecture much better. I—"

"Surely you must be mistaken," Helen cried indignantly. "A university with a reputation isn't going to have a man on the faculty who is incompetent to teach."

"Oh, they pick out all kinds of nuts," said Bud carelessly.

Mrs. Minton gave the signal to rise, and her little family got up and trooped into the sitting room. Helen was still burning with resentment.

"I certainly hope you will study and get good grades in your studies," Mr.
Minton said severely to his son as he unfolded his evening newspaper.

"The studies don't count," Bud answered patiently. "The atmosphere counts, and the sports, and the associations you make."

"I'm not sending you to college for atmosphere," began his father, acrimoniously, when the doorbell rang.

Helen opened the door and started a little at sight of the big, smiling man confronting her.

"Didn't you expect me tonight?" he asked pleasantly.

"I thought it was to be Friday night," Helen murmured, confusedly.
"But won't you come in? Fortunately, the whole family is at home."

As she drew the newcomer into the hall, where he began to remove his wraps, Buddie's voice came clear and high from the sitting room.

"But you don't understand, father,
because you have never been to college. The profs don't matter, especially Loverly. He's a big nut. I don't have to study for him. I—"

Helen's cheeks flushed. With a nervous gesture she pushed aside the portieres and stood looking at Buddie, who was directly in her vision. Then she moved away to make room for the tall man who followed her.

"Auntie and uncle," Helen said, in a shy way, "meet Mr. Marshall Lovelace, associate professor of psychology, and my friend."

There was an appalled silence. Buddie's face turned chalk-white. He trembled like an aspen leaf in a storm.

"That's all right, old man," the professor said, good-naturedly, as the boy began stammering excuses. "I don't mind in the least. You are passing through a phase. I call it university superiority. You'll get over it, never fear."

And he sat down and actually, yes, actually acted as though he enjoyed talking to Mr. and Mrs. Minton and Helen, and not one of them had ever been to college.

Buddie looked decidedly crestfallen.

Why the Movies Won
Tommy Taylor, eight years old, was not long ago given his choice of entertainment as between a concert or a picture show. Now, although Tommy is musical and therefore really preferred the concert, he decided after some reflection on the picture show.
When pressed for an explanation he said:

"Well, going to that dark theater makes washing my ears unnecessary."

Paternal Style
"Now, my little man," said the barber to a youngster in the barber's chair, "how do you want your hair cut?"

"With a hole in the top, like dad's," was the reply.—Pittsburgh Sun.

Side Lines Pay Big in Farming
Several Sources of Income Make Most Money on Average Farms.

"The farmer cannot afford to continue with his milking herd or any other single business upon the farm and expect the old farm to show a profit on the balance sheet at the end of the year."
That is the opinion of R. A. Moore, veteran field crop specialist, Wisconsin College of Agriculture.
Farmer Making Most Money.
"The department of economics after years of careful survey has found that the farmer who has several sources of income is the one who is making the most money on the farm," says Moore. Several of the side lines that can be carried along with the general farming will yield a good revenue. Among them, as suggested by the agronomist, are the hogs, poultry, alfalfa hay, alfalfa for seed, clover for seed, canning peas for factory and seed, sugar beets, small fruits, canning crops and pure bred seed.
"The growing of pure bred seed is a line of effort that seems to offer one of the best solutions to the whole problem at present," says Moore. He cites actual examples where other farmers have made good profits in growing pure bred for sale as one of the several lines of efforts on the farm.
"It is not such a severe task for a farmer to put in a dry house 500 bushels of pure bred Golden Glow corn which would have sold this year for $3,000. It makes a great difference to the income on a farm if the farmer can get $3,000 or $4,000 outside of that he receives for dairy products."
Money for Golden Glow.
"Speaking to a dairyman of Iowa county last year in regard to how matters were going upon the farm," relates Moore, "I was met with the remark, that it would have been pretty tough sledding if it had not been for the $4,700 he received for Golden Glow and Silver King seed corn."
Moore points out other instances where farmers of Wisconsin have had good returns from their side lines. "One dairyman sold 100 tons of alfalfa beside that required for his cows and received $2,500, while another farmer of Brown county grew $1,440 worth of alfalfa seed on 16 acres or at the rate of $90 per acre. Still another farmer grew six acres of canning peas and received $500 for them and got back the pea vines for silage."

Whitewash in Poultry House in Great Favor
Whitewash can scarcely be used too often around the poultry house, especially if the house is an old one or has been made from old lumber. It is a great germicide and when germs and poultry lice are buried under whitewash their course is finished.
Whitewash has the further value of filling up the unsightly places, and a rough board holds more of it than a smooth one. Some poultrymen whitewash their poultry houses only once a year—some do this twice or more each year. But the man who gives a monthly application is taking one of the surest ways of protecting his flock against lice or disease.

Eggs for Hatching
Experimental work has definitely shown that heavy egg production from hens within 90 days of the time their eggs are used for hatching purposes has little if any effect upon the hatchability of the eggs. Where practical to do so, the use of hens one year or more of age is to be preferred to pullets.
Using eggs for hatching from a flock that has been showing heavy production for some time may result in a lower proportion of fertile eggs, a higher proportion of chicks dying in the shell, and lowered vitality of chicks. These chicks will be more difficult to raise and may not grow so rapidly.

Mistake With Clover
One of the most frequent mistakes made when pasturing sweet clover is that of not having sufficient live stock on the pasture to keep the growth subdued. The pasture will last much later in the season of the second year if the growth is pastured fairly heavily. The curmin content of young, succulent shoots is much lower than that of older, more mature plants. When the season is exceedingly dry and long, the curmin content sometimes gets so high that the plants cease to be profitable.

Good Manuring Plan
It is usually advisable to make an application of manure to corn land rather than oats. There is danger of the oats lodging if manure is applied. The increased value of the crop is usually greater in the case of corn than in oats. If the manure is applied to corn, and the oats and wheat follow in the rotation, both of the small grain crops will receive considerable value from the application of manure.

Value of Corn Silage
A ton of silage made out of 10-bushel corn may have just as great a feeding value pound for pound as silage made from 40-bushel corn. On the other hand it may have considerably less feeding value. If the proportion of stalk and grain is the same in 10-bushel corn as it is in the case of 40-bushel corn the feeding value would be the same in each case.

French Law Cuts Revenue

A law was passed in France recently making the legal adoption of children relatively easy, and the new measure is resulting in loss of revenue to the government. Inheritance taxes in France are heavy, but are much lighter for children than for unrelated inheritors. Therefore testators adopt distant relatives and friends to whom they desire to leave money, and evade the high tax.

British Cross-Word Now Task for Savants

Oxford, England.—The cross-word puzzle craze reached its zenith last month and is now on the wane, according to Oxford librarians. In Oxford, as elsewhere, it more than doubled the sales of dictionaries, and the demands made upon reference libraries were so great that one librarian threatened to shut up shop altogether.

The explanation given for the failure of popular interest is that the later puzzles have become so difficult, through the increased experience of their creators, that no ordinary mortal can conveniently solve them.

Men who during the war had little difficulty in deciphering the secret and confidential codes of both the enemy and the allies have organized "pools of intellect" and settled down seriously to the solution of all possible cross-words.

OLD RITUAL AT PRINCE'S BIRTH

Women of Gypsy Tribe Enact Ancient Rites.

Concordia, Kan.—Out of the mists of ages recently came an ancient ritual of the Orient, its very origin lost in the mystery of the ages, to be used again on the moonlit prairies of Kansas when a Romany princeling, direct descendant of a history-old Indo-Aryan royalty, was ushered into the world in a cottonwood grove along the Republican river.

Rising and falling, rising and falling in weird cadences, an ancient chant echoed through the woods when a son was born to King Mitchell, hereditary ruler of a tribe of true gypsies, encamped on the Frank McLean farm, three miles northwest of this city. The baby will be blessed of the gods of legend, as he was brought into the tribe with all the observance of old customs that have survived through a thousand generations. Guarded now in his helplessness of infancy, he in turn will become the tribe's ruler after the death of his royal father.

Harking back to times when medicine and surgery were unknown, Romany tribes even today use the power of chorused song to aid their women in childbirth.

Thousands of years later, gypsy wanderers chanting a similar antiphonal form, the most primitive harmony, brought into rhythm the utterings of a tribal queen in childbirth. While the fires of the camp were piled high with wood, the dusky women gathered in a group while the mother of a coming prince prepared for the ordeal. Suddenly her voice was raised. It was the first note of the song voiced in strident, piercing tones. As it died, back came the answer from the tribeswomen: "O Lord, give ease."

Rolling and rolling backward and forward, the strange chant grew, weaving a rhythm which was finally caught by the woman.

Hour after hour in the dark woods the song continued. Faster and yet faster the cadence grew until, caught fully in the hypnotic pulsing, the queen was delivered of a son and the song was turned to a paeon of joy.

HOLIDAY TIME WITH THE PORTO RICANS

Christmas Offers Pleasures New to Northerners.

A morning dip in the Caribbean sea, freshly gathered oranges and grapefruit for breakfast, eaten in a patio surrounded by the delicious freshness of flowers still wet with dew, a gloriously blue sky overhead—these were a few of the reasons why we left home and the frozen North at the holiday season to seek the land where poinsettias grow wild in the dazzling tropical sunshine. Even though such surroundings did not seem at all in keeping with our idea of the Christmas season, the experience of merely being there was delightful and long to be remembered, says a contributor in the New York Herald-Tribune.

Christmas in Porto Rico is a religious holiday and not a gift day. The real celebration, such as we know, comes in January and is called Three Kings' day. The fifth, sixth and seventh days of the month celebrate the visit of the wise men to Christ's birthplace. On the evening of January 5 the children arrange boxes containing grass outside the windows of their homes for the horses of the kings. Inside are placed their shoes for the gifts that the wise men bring them, as they did the Christ child. Almost two weeks are given up to merrymaking among both old and young. There is little work done, especially among the country people, who go from house to house for dancing.

The guitar and many odd instruments, some of which are of Indian origin, furnish the music. One of the group often sings, improvising words to suit the occasion. In the absence of music for dancing, hives are tightly stretched on sticks and are beaten to the accompaniment of a rasping noise made by scratching with a wire a gourd cut with grooves before drying.

Although there are many days of feasting, the greatest preparations are made for January 6. The plumpest of little pink-eyed pigs is persuaded to leave the company of his brothers and sisters, pass through the hands of the cook and, when delicately roasted over a bed of charcoal, occupy the place of honor among the multitude of Christmas dishes. Meats, sweet potatoes, such as we do not see in our northern markets, are sliced raw, fried and served with it. Yautia, a starchy root vegetable, is boiled. Large green bananas are roasted, or baked in wine, brown sugar and spices.

Chicken with rice is a favorite dish, and gandules, a cousin to the bean, is cooked in a highly seasoned sauce. The salad is usually quite simple, a favorite one being sprouts of a certain variety of palm, dressed with olive oil and lime juice and served on a bed of lettuce. Sweetmeats hold just as prominent a place on the bill of fare as they do in the North. Many sweets have a fruit foundation in the form of a paste or of crystallized fruit, the guava and bitter orange being favorite fruits for this preparation. The lechaza is a melonlike fruit introduced into Spain by the Moors, and brought by the Spaniards to America. While still green the fruit is thinly sliced and cooked with brown sugar.

Another sweet which is given freely to children is made of the sweet potato. The vegetable is first cooked and mashed, then cooked again with sugar and coconut milk. The mixture is made quite stiff, and when cool it is cut into squares. Very small portions of these desserts are served, and they are usually accompanied with cheese. Fresh fruits in abundance help to decorate the Christmas table. The orange and grapefruit season is at its height, and fresas, a kind of strawberry, may be gathered the year around.

The very name Caribbean sea spells romance. Stories of Sir Francis Drake and the pirates and buccaneers who met in battle here came to our minds as we gazed out over the peaceful waters. Not exactly Christmaslike, but a peaceful, pleasant holiday nevertheless.

Worth Waiting For

One depositor of a Rochester (N. Y.) bank, had an unexpected cause for thanksgiving. He called at the bank with a passbook that had not been presented for interest since 1905. When told there would be a little delay in writing up the passbook he flatly refused to wait and only did so after considerable persuasion. He apparently considered what interest might be due as of little importance. The passbook, when presented, showed a balance of about $1,100, and was returned to him with $1,463.89 credited in interest and a total balance of $2,563.31.

Perfectly Natural

"My stars!" ejaculated Mrs. Johnson upon her return from a call on a neighbor, "Mizzus Spradling told me she'd heard that some feller shot and killed his brother-in-law at the Christmas eve dance tuther night over beyond Mount Pisgah."

"Aw, well, when a feller is a brother-in-law and then up and goes to a dance what in torment can he expect to get—p'tu!—shot?" returned Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge.—Kansas City Star.

ADOBE HOME OF KIT CARSON RESTORED

Will Be Preserved as Memorial to Pioneer.

In a dusty, narrow street, just off the plaza at Taos, N. M., is the original home of Kit Carson, a long, low adobe which has recently been restored from a crumbling half ruin to the rude comfort of its original state.

The simple house in this ancient Spanish village seems a fitting memorial to the man who lived in it. Carson was also a man of affairs, a pioneer leader, as fearless in the council chamber as he was on the trail. His shrewd diplomacy won over many an obstacle, and his deeds of daring were as spectacular as those of a motion picture hero of today. He was the friend of governors, army officers, Indians and settlers. There are pioneers in New Mexico to day whose eyes light at the mention of his name, and his generosity is still a tradition among Indians and Mexicans, says a correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor.

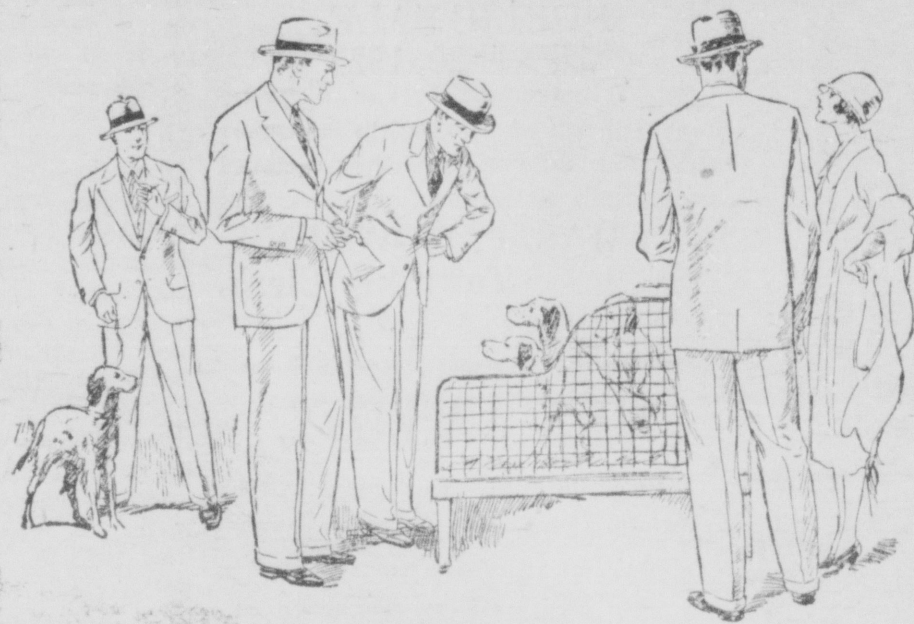

As a scout, working lone-handed in the most trying conditions, Carson developed a remarkable resourcefulness, combining the Indian's outdoor craft with the white man's natural inheritance. Much of every sort came to the Taos home seeking Carson's advice and services. He carried government messages of the greatest importance, guided exploring parties, and helped poor Mexicans recover stolen property or perhaps wife or children who had been carried off by the Indians. His sense of justice was keen and he unsparingly championed the cause of the oppressed. Like most lovers of the open he liked also a home and a fireplace. His wife was a proud and beautiful Spanish woman who appreciated his heroic qualities.

For years the adobe house was left untenanted. Vagrant Indians and Mexicans who remembered Carson as their friend claimed its hospitality. They built mesquite fires in the great fireplace, slept on the floors of the deserted rooms and went their way again. Sand storms picked holes in the walls and roof. Wandering cattle and burros crowded through the broken doors. Finally the women of Taos decided that the old house must be repaired. They gave musical programs and various other entertainments, and little by little they raised the necessary money. The foundation was rebuilt, a new roof put on and the adobe walls replastered by native workmen in the traditional fashion. Doors and windows were replaced with exact duplicates, and the hospitable fireplace again invites the friendly council.

DUSTY MILLER WILL LECTURE AT TARLTON

Noted Humorist Will Speak in Community Hall, June Seventeen.

Thurmon Miller, of Wilmington, Ohio, editor and publisher will lecture at Tarlton Community hall, Wednesday evening, June 17.

He has lectured in Circleville and at the Jackson township school, and those who have heard him vouch for an evening of rare entertainment, as he is a humorist of great talent.

The committee found June 17 is the only date open until September, so his lectures must be worth while to be in such demand; and when we are told that he receives as much as $250 and $300 an evening in large cities, the people of Tarlton and vicinity feel flattered to know that he is coming to their village in response to an invitation from the committee and in behalf of the Community club.

The admission charge is 25 cents and ten cents extra for reserved seat.

The regular business meeting of the club will be on Tuesday evening, June 16.

A good attendance of the members and all others is urged for both these meetings.

Do not miss the opportunity for a good hearty laugh.

Perhaps he will tell us why he signs himself "Dusty Miller."

The people of this city were so well pleased with Mr. Miller's talk at the Rotary club meeting, that many will probably go from here to Tarlton to hear him again.

HANDS OFF POLICY IS BORAH'S ADVICE

JAP GOVERNMENT ORDERS FOUR DESTROYERS TO CHINA

Washington Is Uneasy Over the State of Affairs in China—the President or His Cabinet Have Not Taken Up the Matter—Message of Charge Mayer.

Anti-foreign agitation in the Canton vicinity is causing uneasiness in that place and nearby cities, Consul General Jenkins informed the state department.

"During a student demonstration in Wuchow, on June 8, a mob yelled 'kill foreigners' and threw stones at the American Baptist hospital," the message said.

The consul is continuing to urge Americans to leave the Canton region for Hongkong and other safe places.

A report from Charge Ferdinand Mayer at Peking that representatives of the Chinese student group concerned in the Shanghai incidents had requested American assistance in seeing that justice was done in that case, inclined officials to increased hopefulness that the anti-foreign outbreak would not develop into a movement which threatened American lives.

There was no word available, either at the White House or state department, to show that the Chinese situation had engaged the attention of the cabinet extensively at its meeting today.

In the absence of direct word from cabinet circles a telegram made public by Chairman William E. Borah, of the Senate Foreign Relations committee, declaring he favored "withdrawal of extra territorial rights in China as speedily as practicable," took on special significance.

The telegram, which was a reply to a protest from an American citizen whose name the senator did not disclose, stated that, serious as the situation in China might be, it did not arise from "acts or promises of the United States" and that he saw no reason why the Washington government should be drawn into controversies of other powers or with the Chinese authorities or people.

Mr. Borah's attitude was regarded in certain quarters as representing views of the administration, based upon developments up to this time that the United States and its nationals in China were not directly involved in the present disturbance and were not likely to be unless the student protest movement against foreign extra territorial rights should get out of hand.

The report from Charge Mayer at Peking on the demonstration there June 15, in which 15,000 workers and students took part, brought out the destructive rather than constructive nature of the student propaganda.

The demonstration was peaceful, being conducted under the eyes of troops specially brought into the city by the Provisional government to insure foreigners against attack, but the demands made by the demonstrators showed that they contemplated merely withdrawal of extra territorial stipulations.

Mr. Mayer's message quoted these demands as follows:

- "1. To sever relations with England.
- "2. To send troops for the purpose of protecting the Chinese merchants in the foreign concessions at Hankow.
- "3. To circularize all the provinces by telegram to organize a national relief army."

ROY STRAWSER BRINGS SUIT FOR INJURIES

Norfolk and Western Defendant in $50,000 Case—Accident at Ritt's Crossing.

Two damage suits for $50,000 each were filed in federal court Monday morning against railroads.

Roy Strawser asks for this sum for injuries received when he was injured while working on a Norfolk & Western railroad bridge about four and one-half miles north of Circleville.

In his petition he declares that he was ordered under a railroad car crane while working on a bridge abutment at location, to make repairs, and that the crane in some manner released the crane which started down the track. He lists his injuries as crushed leg, fractured skull, an eye injury and declares that they are permanent. The accident happened on December 30, 1924.—Columbus Dispatch.

BOYS AND GIRLS ARE TO VISIT CAPITAL CITY

Club Tour Will be Made July 9—Dinner on the State University Campus.

Parents who go on the Pickaway County Boys' and Girls' Club tour will in most cases enter the Ohio penitentiary for the first time.

Each township is making arrangements for its own transportation and meal. Several township Farm Bureau chairmen appointed committees to work with the club leaders in organizing their townships. Township chairmen who have not appointed such a committee will do so within the next week.

All machines will meet at the "Pen" at 8 o'clock Thursday, July 9. Cars can be parked on the first street west of the penitentiary.

Warden Thomas has consented to take the party thru in lots of one hundred each. It is very important that each township arrive at the appointed hour, eight o'clock.

The tourists upon leaving the penitentiary, will drive north to the Ohio State University campus. The picnic dinners will be eaten on the campus grounds just south of the library. Each township will provide for one or two extra, as some of the University faculty always enjoy eating a good farm dinner with real live Buckeyes.

Dean Alfred Vivian and Senator C. C. Chapplear will give short talks at the close of the meal.

A tour to various points of interest on the campus and will follow the speaking. The stadium, flower gardens, museum, university barns and many other interesting places will be visited. The plans are to start home by 4 o'clock.

The club boys and girls are especially anxious to attend to help make their club grade high at Pumpkin Show time.

FARM BUREAU NEWS WRITERS GET POINTERS

Representatives From Ten Townships Attend—Will Print Best Article.

The publicity work of the Farm bureau was given the once over to representatives from ten townships. The work was explained by Agent J. D. Bragg and A. P. Wald, of the Farm bureau, conducted the meeting Tuesday afternoon at the office of the Farm bureau.

The object of the meeting was to teach a class of girls how to get a news article for newspapers pertaining to the farm and the raising of crops, poultry, stock and everything about the farm of any interest. The publicity is a feature that all enterprises are going into to advertise what they are doing and the news writing end has to be learned and cultivated.

Newspapers demand that you write your copy on one side of the sheet only, that the article should be started at least from two to three inches from the top in order that the editor has space to place a head on the article. Another thing that you should follow in news writing, is to start out right. Double space for typewritten articles and triple space your lines if it is in your own hand writing. This must be done in order to have your copy edited properly and also to give the editor a chance to correct by writing between the lines. Punctuation, capitalization and spelling are all gone over before your copy reaches the compositor or linotypist.

In starting to write up a piece of news for the Farm bureau or a newspaper or magazine, start out with the description of the subject in your first paragraph. Follow with time and place and do not fail to do this as it localizes your article. Then without repetition, tell your story in your own language in as concrete a form as possible. Do not fail to give the interesting part of the article a little local color, but do not draw on your imagination too freely, as it will spoil the article and make it worthless as a news.

Something unique, new or novel, something out of the ordinary is the thing readers of papers desire. It need not be sensational and it must be as nearly accurate as possible.

The idea is to give publicity to township meetings for county offices and for projects going on in the various townships.

What news is, where to find it, methods of reporting how to prepare news and how to write it were thoroughly gone over by the speakers. Each one present wrote a news article on the poultry calendar records for May. These were judged and the best article will appear in the county paper.

Gloves, Hose, Fans, Scarfs, to MatchRage for Ensemble Idea in General Reaches to All Accessories.

Among the most intriguing glove novelties are the mousquetaire in bright colors—rose, yellow, abanthé, turquoise. They are reminders of the styles chronicled long, long ago, but not seen in many years. With the rage of the ensemble idea in general, there are stockings and shoes, scarfs and fans to match the new prettily colored gloves. The craze for embroidered cuffs and linings and stitched exteriors has inspired some most attractive novelties. Most of the late styles in gauntlets have cuffs lined with gay plaid or figured silk, and are embroidered in flowers or figures, all in bright colors. The newest gloves have also a bright silk stitching on the back and the seams are overstitched in the same shade. It is unusual to see a glove of the new style with the cuff worn otherwise than inside out, as it were.

The craze for flower trimming, garnitures and fabric-made flowers has stimulated many original designs, and the more important shops are giving conspicuous place to many lovely things in these floral novelties. The single blossoms or sprays that contain one full-blown flower, a bud and two or three leaves are made of silk, velvet, batiste or metal tissue. Enormous roses, lilies, trumpet flowers, poppies, are fashioned out of taffeta, used double, each petal of two shades, hand-sewn and wired between the layers to give it a natural shape. The buds and leaves are made in the same manner and all are attached to a flexible silk or chenille-covered stem. Big, luscious pansies are made in velvet shading from deep purple to pale blue and in the dull reds and yellows that are found in garden flower beds.

Water lilies are marvelously reproduced in white taffeta, and the round yellow variety is made to look like the real article with organdie, tinted with water colors. The pads are done in green silk, cleverly veined and wired, and long stems are of rubber and silk. A great variety of poppies and other large flowers in silk and velvet are stitched with flosses, and some, particularly those done in black velvet, are showily outlined with rhinestones. Almost every flower grown is reproduced in this fabric version, somewhat nouveau in its art, to be sure, but decorative. Sweet peas, wistaria blossoms, violets, nasturtiums, delphinium and snapdragons, gaudily painted in their true colors, are all most cleverly done. A homely intriguing novelty is the little posy and spray of leaves crocheted with colored yarns.

Subtlety of Coloring; Marked Individuality

The new prints, as shown in the mode, have proved their adaptability to the simple smart modes of the present season. In this frock distinction of line is accentuated by the harmonious coloring of a print used in combination with a plain silk.

Contrast in Fabric and Color of New Millinery

Contrast in texture as well as in coloring that is achieved by the use of materials of varied character is exemplified in the new hats for early summer. These feature novel ways of combining velvet and straw. Besides being bound and faced with velvet, many have crowns made entirely of the fabric draped in flattering lines.

Wide-brimmed hats frequently have a full crown of velvet with a brim of straw, or the order is reversed and a soft gathered or shirred brim of velvet is attached to a crown of straw. On black hats of this type ink roses or yellow water lilies add a bit of color.

A System of Farming That Brings Health and Prosperity

Every farm, regardless of the method of farming practiced or of the crops raised, should have at least a few good milk cows to provide

- (1) Enough milk, cream and butter for home use;
- (2) Enough skim-milk to raise some calves, pigs and chickens;
- (3) Enough cream or butter to sell to pay, in part or entirely, current living expenses.

This plan has been a "life-saver" for thousands of farmers, especially during the hard times of the past two years. It insures a living, at least, and often other income besides.

Such a plan pays best with a De Laval Cream Separator. It soon pays for itself—and skims cleaner, lasts longer and is easier to operate and clean than any other.

TIMELY WARNING TO CARELESS MOTORIST

Above is shown an impressive sign, the purpose of which is to warn reckless motorists, and which has been placed at the head of St. Charles avenue, the main thoroughfare in New Orleans. The daily toll of killed and injured by auto is registered on the sign.

JAYWALKER WILL CAUSE TROUBLE

His One Ambition in Life Seems to Be a Desire to Be Run Over.

No law-abiding citizen can drive an automobile for more than a week without introduction to the Jaywalker. He may step unexpectedly into the path of your car from nowhere; he may be crossing the street aimlessly in a trance; or he may stop suddenly in the midst of traffic to adjust a shoe. His one ambition in life is to be run over violently and you are bound to meet him eventually.

Then the steering wheel will be thrown wildly to one side, plunging nearby cars into dangerous confusion and narrowly missing the Jaywalker who usually skips away with a merry "Ha, Ha," indicating his jocular interpretation of the incident.

Cause of Trouble.

If, by any chance, the Jaywalker outwits the driver and manages to get plastered all over the pavement, there's trouble all hand. Both parties have an equal right to the street in the eyes of the law and romantic bandages have a far greater sympathetic appeal to the court than the common-sense, but intact, appearance of the car owner—the comparison is seldom representative of the circumstances attending the accident. Cases are on record where His Honor did not award damages to the Jaywalker, but they are few and far between. In other words, if your car collides forcibly with a member of this peculiar species, it is liable to cause plenty of trouble and most perfectly good money.

Eternal Vigilance.

Now, having come to the conclusion that the motorist is better off if he does not hit the Jaywalker, what is to be done about it? Unfortunately there is no other remedy than eternal vigilance. Even on a country road, deserted save for one lone pedestrian, be careful. He may be a Jaywalker who will stoop in front of your car to pluck a daisy just as you draw abreast of him.

Until all persons with these irritating tendencies are tied to the sidewalks, surrounded by a twelve-foot fence or hung, the Jaywalker will haunt us. Expect him—outwit him—refuse to kill him—thus keeping out of trouble and the courts by bearing the entire burden yourself, unfair as it may seem.

Plan to Save Gasoline Is Told by an Engineer

About ninety-nine drivers out of a hundred are wasteful of gasoline, according to an engineer, who cites a number of ways the fuel may be conserved, both for the general good and as a matter of economy for the owner. Here they are:

Carburetor adjustment is of prime importance. A mixture that is too rich or too lean will cause more gasoline to be used in performing a given amount of labor than a correct mixture. But don't attempt to adjust your carburetor unless you know how.

Most cars have what may be termed an economical speed. It ranges from twelve to twenty miles per hour. When you get above that speed, the amount of gas used per mile increases.

Anticipate slowing up and stops. Close the throttle and disengage the clutch far enough ahead of the place you want to stop so that very little use of the brake will be necessary. Whenever you use the brakes you destroy the momentum that has required gasoline to create.

Accelerate gradually. It takes less gas to do that than to reach a fast gait quickly.

Whenever you allow the engine to run with the car standing, you are using up gas that doesn't make any showing on your odometer.

Display of Tags

One tag shall be on the front and the other on the rear of the car.

The tags shall at all times be parallel to the axles.

Both tags must be rigidly attached, so as not to swing or oscillate.

The lower edge of the rear plate shall be at least fifteen inches above the ground.

They shall not be covered, obscured, bent, altered or defaced in any manner.

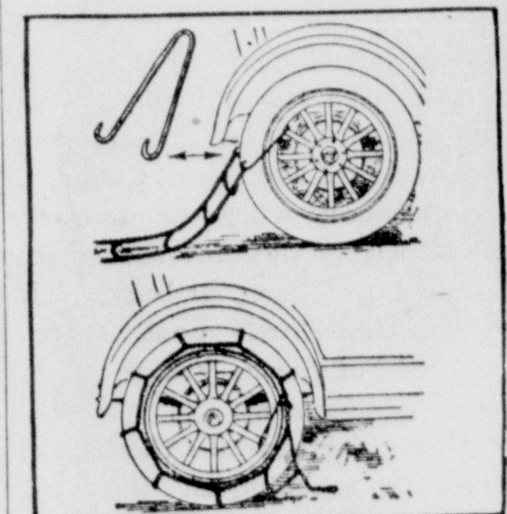

They shall be kept free from oil, grease, dirt or other substance likely to impair legibility.

The rear tags shall not be underneath any part of the body more than twelve inches from the rear end. This provision has particular reference to trucks.

The rear tags shall be illuminated between one hour after sunset and one hour before sunrise, so that the registration number can be plainly distinguished.

Hook for Applying Auto Chains Very Convenient

Auto chains can readily be applied with a hook of the kind shown in the illustration. The hook is made from a length of steel rod, bent as indicated. In use, it is placed over one of the wheel spokes and the second links of the chain are slipped over the bent ends, so that when the car is driven forward, the chain is pulled on the tire. Where the chain comes in contact with the road directly under the tire, the cross links retard the movement, while the hook pulls the chain taut. The first links are then fastened to the opposite ends of the chain, or if this is too loose, the second links are used after the hook has been removed.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Help Reduce Accidents by Driving Carefully

You will help reduce accidents if you:

Don't cut corners.

Give the proper signal whenever your action in starting from the curb, in turning, in changing your course or in stopping may reasonably be said to affect other traffic.

Don't consider driving at maximum speed within the law—the legal speed is a safe speed at all times.

Don't turn except at corners in business districts and close, built-up sections.

Don't pass street cars discharging passengers.

Don't attempt to pass a vehicle if there is another vehicle approaching from the opposite direction unless the road is clear for one hundred yards.

Don't drive your car out of the garage without knowing your brakes and steering gear are tight and your headlights comply with the law.

Slow down when you observe children playing near the curb or in the street. Remember, they have not the wisdom of an adult.

Don't drive with the belief that the pedestrian is familiar with road rules.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting, and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. Will you let me help you select the memorial for your lot. Call at show room. NO AGENTS.

Keep Sweet

"Suppose you look at the world through a yellow pane of glass," said the late beloved Doctor Jowett. "Why, then you have a yellow world. Suppose you look through a dirty pane of glass. Why, then everything is defiled. Suppose you look at everything through the yellow pane of jealousy, or the red pane of envy—why, then you disfigure everything. And if you look at things through a soured disposition you will not see anything that is lovely or sweet. The cynical heart has a charmless world."

Positive Identification
C. S. Collins, superintendent of the identification bureau of Scotland Yard, who has made nearly 500,000 finger prints of criminals and suspects, retired recently after 30 years' service in the London police department. From the finger prints on file in Mr. Collins' department some 200,000 identifications have been made, according to authorities, without a single mistake. "I would stake my life on the probability that there never will be finger prints alike, even if the world goes on indefinitely," Mr. Collins said recently, in speaking of his work. During the next generation, he asserted, finger prints would be much more generally used everywhere, not only in the identification of criminals, but as a matter of record in births, and numerous other directions.

FORMER SAFETY DIRECTOR

Edward E. Curtis of Canton Lost
Appeal to Ohio Supreme Court.

Columbus, June 16.—(UP.)—E. E. Curtis, former Canton, O., safety director, today lost his appeal to the supreme court. The high tribunal affirmed the judgment of the lower court which found against Curtis in Stark county where he was ousted as safety director for alleged corrupt practices, bribery. This means that Curtis must serve a sentence of three years in the Ohio Penitentiary.

Going further into the case, in a review, touching on the question of accomplices, the opinion says that "where in a prosecution for crime, persons alleged to be accomplices of the defendant have testified in behalf of the state, it is not error for the court to refuse to instruct the jury that they are in fact accomplices, but the court should define an accomplice and leave it to the jury to determine whether or not the witness is an accomplice."

Sweeping decision of the four judges concurring in the finding that there was no prejudicial error in the lower courts, and that the judgment of the lower courts "must be affirmed," sweeps away the bridge over which the defendant hoped to pass in escaping the sentence of the lower court that he serve a term in the penitentiary.

Ominous

"I've been studying a good deal about resigning my office," declared Constable Sam T. Slackpooter, the guardian of the peace and dignity of Petunia. "It's getting too ominous." "Too—what?" returned Mayor Numbers. "Ominous—or dangerous, if you like that better. You know the new shooting gallery that opened up last week? Well, I've seen no less than eight women, all told, practicing shooting there. It may mean nothing, and it may not; but—"—Kansas City Times

ROME SUFFERS
SINKING SPELLS

Series of Collapses of Streets Causes Alarm.

Rome.—Despite the reassuring statements and glib explanations which have been made by the Roman municipal authorities of an unusual series of street collapses and cave-ins, the fact that six of these disquieting accidents have occurred within the brief space of several weeks is causing considerable alarm here.

The first of these accidents was a cave-in which caused a large section of the Via Ripetta to fall to a depth of about six feet. The collapse occurred in broad daylight, the ground falling away several feet in front of a crowded tramway. But the proximity of the Via Ripetta to the Tiber river offered the apparent explanation that the recent heavy rains and flood condition of the river had caused a weakening of the alluvial subsoil along the river bank.

Within a fortnight after this collapse, however, there were five other more or less similar accidents in various sections of the city, some of them far from the river and the Romans, always ready to inject melodrama into the simple facts of daily existence, saw in the series the presentation of a new source of terror. The inhabitants of southern Italy and Sicily live under the Damocletian sword of the ever-present prospect of telluric disturbances; would the Romans have to live in constant dread of the possible effects of a crumbling subsoil?

To this question the authorities have hastened to give an emphatic negation, asserting that each accident had a special cause and that there was no one underlying cause for all of them. In some places, it is explained, too much new construction was weakening the subsoil; in others, rain-water seepage had caused weakness, while in still others excavations for building foundations had unearthed ancient sewage systems.

Remaining Vacant Tribal
Indian Lands to Be Sold

Washington.—For the purpose of concluding the tribal affairs of the Choctaw, Chickasaw, Cherokee, and Creek Indian nations of Oklahoma the Secretary of the Interior has authorized the sale of the remaining vacant tribal lands and town lots belonging to these Indians.

There are 438 tracts of unallotted timber and segregated land and 95 town lots to be offered for sale. Most of them have been sold previously, but the purchasers have forfeited them through failure to make payments.

The secretary authorized the superintendent of the Five Civilized Tribes with headquarters at Muskogee to conduct auction sales for the disposition of the tracts of lands and town lots. They are to be sold without regard to valuation to the highest bidder.

The sale will be held at certain railroad points in eastern Oklahoma from July 13 to July 18, 1925. Terms of the sale will be 25 per cent cash, the balance in three equal annual installments payable in one, two, and three years with interest at 5 per cent per year. No limitations as to the number of acres and lots any one person may purchase has been made.

Receipts from the sale of the 438 tracts of land and 95 town lots will be placed in the tribal funds of these Indians to be distributed to them with the final settlement of their affairs.

SEWING CLUB SESSIONS AT DARBYVILLE

Interesting Program Rendered
by Members—Design for Club Pin Adopted.

June 2, the Buckeye Sewing club held its regular meeting at the home of the leader, Mrs. J. N. McKinley, and the session was called to order by the president, Violet Ginder.

The roll call was answered by telling "One way to better the club." The suggestions made were as follows: Cora Bussert, "No slander or gossip of club members;" Louise Carpenter, "Regular attendance;" Violet Ginder, "More sociability;" Blanche Heeter, "Pay dues regularly;" Christena Heeter, "To agree quickly;" Dorothy Hill, "Demonstrating team;" Florence Hill, "Pay dues regularly;" Pauline Fuller, "No hard feelings."

Two new members were received, Florence Hill and Pauline Fuller. Florence will take the first year work and Pauline the second year along with Violet Ginder.

The club pins will be round, gold and blue, with the initials "B. S. C." Buckeye Sewing Club.

The constitution and by-laws were adopted and the members practiced stitches. Some of them were even and uneven, basting overcast and running. All showed talent, but Violet Ginder and Christian Heeter both had very nearly a perfect running stitch.

After an hour of sewing, all were entertained by the social committee, Christena Heeter and Louise Carpenter. They gave some "peppy" songs and yells. Then each member put on a stunt and a most enjoyable program was rendered. Refreshments of sandwiches, cake and orangeade were served by the committee.

THAT MEXICAN CASE

Washington, June 16.—(UP.)—President Coolidge gave his consent to the issuance of the Kellogg statement only after he had been informed that there was no other way to bring the Mexican government to a realization that this country would no longer tolerate disrespect to its representative and to American diplomatic approaches.

The origin of the American move as told to the United Press follows:

"For weeks Ambassador Sheffield had thought that there was a growing lack of respect for the United States on the part of the Mexican government. Many of his notes to the foreign office went unanswered. There were several seizures of American land, notably one by the Mexican government itself.

"Sheffield protested but apparently to no avail. He then came to Washington and laid the situation before Mr. Coolidge and Kellogg. He demanded, according to the story, that this government make an open statement to Calles so that the Mexican and American people would know that this government was displeased. In this way only, he argued, could pressure be brought on the Mexican government for the desired results."

Washington	14

The Circleville Eagle team, accompanied by a large crowd of rooters, journeyed to Wilmington Sunday, and got ample revenge for the defeat here at the hands of Wilmington a week ago.

Hard hitting characterized the game Sunday, four home runs, one triple and a flock of singles being garnered during the course of the contest.

Hironamous was not so fortunate as on the previous Sunday, and when the smoke had cleared away Circleville had collected fifteen safe blows from his delivery, the most of them clean, hard hits, and two going for home runs.

Dewey had only one really bad inning, the second, when the home team gave him a terrific bombardment, a home run, a double and three singles following each other in order. The Wilmington team batted around this inning, scoring three runs and having three men on bases when Pettit caught Davis' fly for the final out.

Pettit, who was moved over to left for this game, had a strenuous day of it, catching six fly balls and chasing three others that were hit out of his reach. Several of his catches were on the circus order, and his work made quite an impression on the home fans.

Schilders who played center field, caught the only ball hit to him, and at bat made one safe hit.

Tommy Thompson was one of the big noises of the game; playing with a broken finger sustained the week previous, he handled three ground balls in faultless style, and at bat made three safe hits, two of which drove in runs.

Pettit also made three hits, one of which netted him a home run when it bounced over the left fielder's head.

McGrainer was also back hitting his stride, getting a home run, single and base on balls in five trips to the plate and hitting another to first base so fast that it might have been termed a hit rather than an error for Dodds.

Circleville started the game with a rush, putting over three runs in the first and two in the second and were never headed by the home team although the score was six to five at the end of the sixth inning.

On next Sunday Circleville will play at Washington and if they can win the contest will go into a tie with Washington for first place. If they lose they will be in a tie for the cellar position with the team that loses the Wilmington-London bout.

AMUSEMENTS

Popular acclaim was responsible for placing Alice Terry and Conway Tearle in the roles of Ruth Jordan and Stephen Ghent in "The Great Divide" the Metro-Goldwyn screen version of William Vaughn Moody's famous Arizona romance which comes to the Metropolitan theater today.

Suggestions from the public and from dramatic critics thruout the United States, solicited by the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio after film rights to the famous play had been acquired, named Mr. Tearle and Miss Terry the ideal pair for the star parts in "The Great Divide."

Almost every leading man and woman in motion pictures was put forward, but the names of Alice Terry and Conway Tearle led those of the other candidates by a wide margin. Other prominent players in the cast include Wallace Beery, ZaSu Pitts, Huntly Gordon, Allan Forrest, Ford Sterling, William Orlamond and George Cooper. Waldemar Young prepared the adaptation.

Books—Old and Rare.

Imprints, the searcher for rare books must be able to recognize one when he sees it. As few people possess the expert knowledge which enables them to recognize, in a pile of books, what is valuable and what is not, it is advisable and generally profitable, to secure expert advice before disposing of any considerable collection of old books. Nor is it well to expect, as the shrewd old Yankee proverb puts it, that there is a bass under every lily-pod. In most old attics in New England there are collections, large or small, of aged books. The chances are that they are valuable only as waste paper; yet again, they hold the chance of a find.

UNIVERSITY IMPORTANCE

By MISS EVA ARONSON

(©, 1924, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"PEOPLE who have never been to college cannot be said to be well-educated," stated Buddie, with the conviction of a man of the world. And why not? Buddie was just sixteen and this was his first year at college. Who was more competent to give an opinion on any subject under the sun than Buddie?

"I suppose that finishes me," Helen, his cousin, said with a laugh. "I have never been to college. I might aim to be a college professor's wife, though," she added, with a twinkle in her eye. "Surely that would be a college education in itself."

"Huh!" grunted Bud, and almost choked over a mouthful of lemon pie. "As if any prof would have you!"

"Why not?" Helen demanded, slightly discomfited. "I am not bad-looking, and I—"

"But you are not well educated," Buddie interrupted crushingly. "You read a lot, it is true, but you couldn't talk coherently on any subject."

"How do you like your teachers?" interposed his father, seeing that Helen was flushing uncomfortably. "Teachers—old sap-heads!" said Buddie, wrinkling his nose. "Especially Lovey, the prof in psychology."

"Is it quite dignified to call your professor Lovey?" inquired his father, respectfully. "Oh, you don't understand, father"—Buddie looked immeasurably bored—"because you have never been to college. The profs know they are called Lovey and Kippy and Mittens, but they pretend they don't know. They feel awfully flattered to be nicknamed by the students."

"I suppose the professors don't count," said Helen resentfully. "You talk as though nobody counts but you." "Well, they don't count," said Buddie promptly. "Now, take this Lovey. He doesn't know how to lecture. I could lecture much better. I—"

"Surely you must be mistaken," Helen cried indignantly. "A university with a reputation isn't going to have a man on the faculty who is incompetent to teach."

"Oh, they pick out all kinds of nuts," said Bud carelessly.

Mrs. Minton gave the signal to rise, and her little family got up and trooped into the sitting room. Helen was still burning with resentment.

"I certainly hope you will study and get good grades in your studies," Mr. Minton said severely to his son as he unfolded his evening newspaper.

"The studies don't count," Bud answered patiently. "The atmosphere counts, and the sports, and the associations you make."

"I'm not sending you to college for atmosphere," began his father, acrimoniously, when the doorbell rang.

Helen opened the door and started a little at sight of the big, smiling man confronting her.

"Didn't you expect me tonight?" he asked pleasantly.

"I thought it was to be Friday night," Helen murmured, confusedly. "But won't you come in? Fortunately, the whole family is at home."

As she drew the newcomer into the hall, where he began to remove his wraps, Buddie's voice came clear and high from the sitting room.

"But you don't understand, father, because you have never been to college. The profs don't matter, especially Lovey. He's a big nut. I don't have to study for him. I—"

Helen's cheeks flushed. With a nervous gesture she pushed aside the portieres and stood looking at Buddie, who was directly in her vision. Then she moved away to make room for the tall man who followed her.

"Auntie and uncle," Helen said, in a shy way, "meet Mr. Marshall Lovelace, associate professor of psychology, and my friend."

There was an appalled silence. Buddie's face turned chalk-white. He trembled like an aspen leaf in a storm.

"That's all right, old man," the professor said, good-naturedly, as the boy began stammering excuses. "I don't mind in the least. You are passing through a phase. I call it university superiority. You'll get over it, never fear."

And he sat down and actually, yes, actually acted as though he enjoyed talking to Mr. and Mrs. Minton and Helen, and not one of them had ever been to college.

Buddie looked decidedly crestfallen.

Why the Movies Won

Tommy Taylor, eight years old, was not long ago given his choice of entertainment as between a concert or a picture show. Now, although Tommy is musical and therefore really preferred the concert, he decided after some reflection on the picture show. When pressed for an explanation he said:

"Well, going to that dark theater makes washing my ears unnecessary."

Paternal Style

"With a hole in the top, like dad's," was the reply.—Pittsburgh Sun.

Side Lines Pay Big in Farming

Several Sources of Income Make Most Money on Average Farms.

"The farmer cannot afford to continue with his milking herd or any other single business upon the farm and expect the old farm to show a profit on the balance sheet at the end of the year."

That is the opinion of R. A. Moore, veteran field crop specialist, Wisconsin College of Agriculture.

Farmer Making Most Money.

"The department of economics after years of careful survey has found that the farmer who has several sources of income is the one who is making the most money on the farm," says Moore. Several of the side lines that can be carried along with the general farming will yield a good revenue. Among them, as suggested by the agronomist, are the hogs, poultry, alfalfa hay, alfalfa for seed, clover for seed, canning peas for factory and seed, sugar beets, small fruits, canning crops and pure bred seed.

"The growing of pure bred seed is a line of effort that seems to offer one of the best solutions to the whole problem at present," says Moore. He cites actual examples where other farmers have made good profits in growing pure bred for sale as one of the several lines of efforts on the farm.

"It is not such a severe task for a farmer to put in a dry house 500 bushels of pure bred Golden Glow corn which would have sold this year for $3,000. It makes a great difference to the income on a farm if the farmer can get $3,000 or $4,000 outside of that he receives for dairy products."

Money for Golden Glow.

"Speaking to a dairyman of Iowa county last year in regard to how matters were going upon the farm," relates Moore, "I was met with the remark, 'that it would have been pretty tough sledding if it had not been for the $4,700 he received for Golden Glow and Silver King seed corn.'"

Moore points out other instances where farmers of Wisconsin have had good returns from their side lines. "One dairyman sold 100 tons of alfalfa beside that required for his cows and received $2,500, while another farmer of Brown county grew $1,440 worth of alfalfa seed on 16 acres or at the rate of $90 per acre. Still another farmer grew six acres of canning peas and received $500 for them and got back the pea vines for silage."

Whitewash in Poultry House in Great Favor

Whitewash can scarcely be used too often around the poultry house, especially if the house is an old one or has been made from old lumber. It is a great germicide and when germs and poultry lice are buried under whitewash their course is finished.

Whitewash has the further value of filling up the unsightly places, and a rough board holds more of it than a smooth one. Some poultrymen whitewash their poultry houses only once a year—some do this twice or more each year. But the man who gives a monthly application is taking one of the surest ways of protecting his flock against lice or disease.

Eggs for Hatching

Experimental work has definitely shown that heavy egg production from hens within 90 days of the time their eggs are used for hatching purposes has little if any effect upon the hatchability of the eggs. Where practical to do so, the use of hens one year or more of age is to be preferred to pullets.

Using eggs for hatching from a flock that has been showing heavy production for some time may result in a lower proportion of fertile eggs, a higher proportion of chicks dying in the shell, and lowered vitality of chicks. These chicks will be more difficult to raise and may not grow so rapidly.

Mistake With Clover

One of the most frequent mistakes made when pasturing sweet clover is that of not having sufficient live stock on the pasture to keep the growth subdued. The pasture will last much later in the season of the second year if the growth is pastured fairly heavily. The cumarin content of young, succulent shoots is much lower than that of older, more mature plants. When the season is exceedingly dry and long, the cumarin content sometimes gets so high that the plants cease to be profitable.

Good Manuring Plan

It is usually advisable to make an application of manure to corn land rather than oats. There is danger of the oats lodging if manure is applied. The increased value of the crop is usually greater in the case of corn than in oats. If the manure is applied to corn, and the oats and wheat follow in the rotation, both of the small grain crops will receive considerable value from the application of manure.

Value of Corn Silage

A ton of silage made out of 10-bushel corn may have just as great a feeding value pound for pound as silage made from 40-bushel corn. On the other hand it may have considerably less feeding value. If the proportion of stalk and grain is the same in 10-bushel corn as it is in the case of 40-bushel corn the feeding value would be the same in each case.

French Law Cuts Revenue

A law was passed in France recently making the legal adoption of children relatively easy, and the new measure is resulting in loss of revenue to the government. Inheritance taxes in France are heavy, but are much lighter for children than for unrelated inheritors. Therefore testators adopt distant relatives and friends to whom they desire to leave money, and evade the high tax.

British Cross-Word Now Task for Savants

Oxford, England.—The crossword puzzle craze reached its zenith last month and is now on the wane, according to Oxford librarians. In Oxford, as elsewhere, it more than doubled the sales of dictionaries, and the demands made upon reference libraries were so great that one librarian threatened to shut up shop altogether. The explanation given for the failure of popular interest is that the later puzzles have become so difficult, through the increased experience of their creators, that no ordinary mortal can conveniently solve them. Men who during the war had little difficulty in deciphering the secret and confidential codes of both the enemy and the allies have organized "pools of intellect" and settled down seriously to the solution of all possible cross-words.

OLD RITUAL AT PRINCE'S BIRTH

Women of Gypsy Tribe Enact Ancient Rites.

Concordia, Kan.—Out of the mists of ages recently came an ancient ritual of the Orient, its very origin lost in the mystery of the ages, to be used again on the moonlit prairies of Kansas when a Romany princeling, direct descendant of a history-old Indo-Aryan royalty, was ushered into the world in a cottonwood grove along the Republican river.

Rising and falling, rising and falling in weird cadences, an ancient chant echoed through the woods when a son was born to King Mitchell, hereditary ruler of a tribe of true gypsies, encamped on the Frank McLean farm, three miles northwest of this city. The baby will be blessed of the gods of legend, as he was brought into the tribe with all the observance of old customs that have survived through a thousand generations. Guarded now in his helplessness of infancy, he in turn will become the tribe's ruler after the death of his royal father.

Harking back to times when medicine and surgery were unknown, Romany tribes even today use the power of chorused song to aid their women in childbirth.

Thousands of years later, gypsy wanderers chanting a similar antiphonal form, the most primitive harmony, brought into rhythm the utterings of a tribal queen in childbirth. While the fires of the camp were piled high with wood, the dusky women gathered in a group while the mother of a coming prince prepared for the ordeal. Suddenly her voice was raised. It was the first note of the song voiced in strident, piercing tones. As it died, back came the answer from the tribeswomen: "O Lord, give ease."

Rolling and rolling backward and forward, the strange chant grew, weaving a rhythm which was finally caught by the woman.

Hour after hour in the dark woods the song continued. Faster and yet faster the cadence grew until, caught fully in the hypnotic pulsing, the queen was delivered of a son and the song was turned to a paeon of joy.

HOLIDAY TIME WITH THE PORTO RICANS

Christmas Offers Pleasures New to Northerners.

A morning dip in the Caribbean sea, freshly gathered oranges and grapefruit for breakfast, eaten in a patio surrounded by the delicious freshness of flowers still wet with dew, a gloriously blue sky overhead—these were a few of the reasons why we left home and the frozen North at the holiday season to seek the land where poinsettias grow wild in the dazzling tropical sunshine. Even though such surroundings did not seem at all in keeping with our idea of the Christmas season, the experience of merely being there was delightful and long to be remembered, says a contributor in the New York Herald-Tribune.

Christmas in Porto Rico is a religious holiday and not a gift day. The real celebration, such as we know, comes in January and is called Three Kings' day. The fifth, sixth and seventh days of the month celebrate the visit of the wise men to Christ's birthplace. On the evening of January 5 the children arrange boxes containing grass outside the windows of their homes for the horses of the kings. Inside are placed their shoes for the gifts that the wise men bring them, as they did the Christ child. Almost two weeks are given up to merry-making among both old and young. There is little work done, especially among the country people, who go from house to house for dancing.

The guitar and many odd instruments, some of which are of Indian origin, furnish the music. One of the group often sings, improvising words to suit the occasion. In the absence of music for dancing, hides are tightly stretched on sticks and are beaten to the accompaniment of a rasping noise, made by scratching with a wire a gourd cut with grooves before drying.

Although there are many days of feasting, the greatest preparations are made for January 6. The plumpest of little pink-eyed pigs is persuaded to leave the company of his brothers and sisters, pass through the hands of the cook and, when delicately roasted over a bed of charcoal, occupy the place of honor among the multitude of Christmas dishes. Merely sweet potatoes, such as we do not see in our northern markets, are sliced raw, fried and served with it. Yautia, a starchy root vegetable, is boiled. Large green bananas are roasted, or baked in wine, brown sugar and spices.

Chicken with rice is a favorite dish, and gaudules, a cousin to the bean, is cooked in a highly seasoned sauce. The salad is usually quite simple, a favorite one being sprouts of a certain variety of palm, dressed with olive oil and lime juice and served on a bed of lettuce. Sweetmeats hold just as prominent a place on the bill of fare as they do in the North. Many sweets have a fruit foundation in the form of a paste or of crystallized fruit, the guava and bitter orange being favorite fruits for this preparation. The lechaza is a melonlike fruit introduced into Spain by the Moors, and brought by the Spaniards to America. While still green the fruit is thinly sliced and cooked with brown sugar.

Another sweet which is given freely to children is made of the sweet potato. The vegetable is first cooked, and mashed, then cooked again with sugar and coconut milk. The mixture is made quite stiff, and when cool it is cut into squares. Very small portions of these desserts are served, and they are usually accompanied with cheese. Fresh fruits in abundance help to decorate the Christmas table. The orange and grapefruit season is at its height, and fresas, a kind of strawberry, may be gathered the year around.

The very name Caribbean sea spells romance. Stories of Sir Francis Drake and the pirates and buccaneers who met in battle here came to our minds as we gazed out over the peaceful waters. Not exactly Christmaslike, but a peaceful, pleasant holiday nevertheless.

Worth Waiting For

One depositor of a Rochester (N. Y.) bank, had an unexpected cause for thanksgiving. He called at the bank with a passbook that had not been presented for interest since 1905. When told there would be a little delay in writing up the passbook he flatly refused to wait and only did so after considerable persuasion. He apparently considered what interest might be due as of little importance. The passbook, when presented, showed a balance of about $1,100, and was returned to him with $1,463.89 credited in interest and a total balance of $2,563.31.

Perfectly Natural

"My stars!" ejaculated Mrs. Johnson upon her return from a call on a neighbor, "Mizzus Spradling told me she'd heard that some feller shot and killed his brother-in-law at the Christmas eve dance tuther night over beyond Mount Pigzy."

"Aw, well, when a feller is a brother-in-law and then up and goes to a dance when in torment can he expect to get 'ptul-shot?" returned Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge.—Kansas City Star.

ADOBE HOME OF KIT CARSON RESTORED

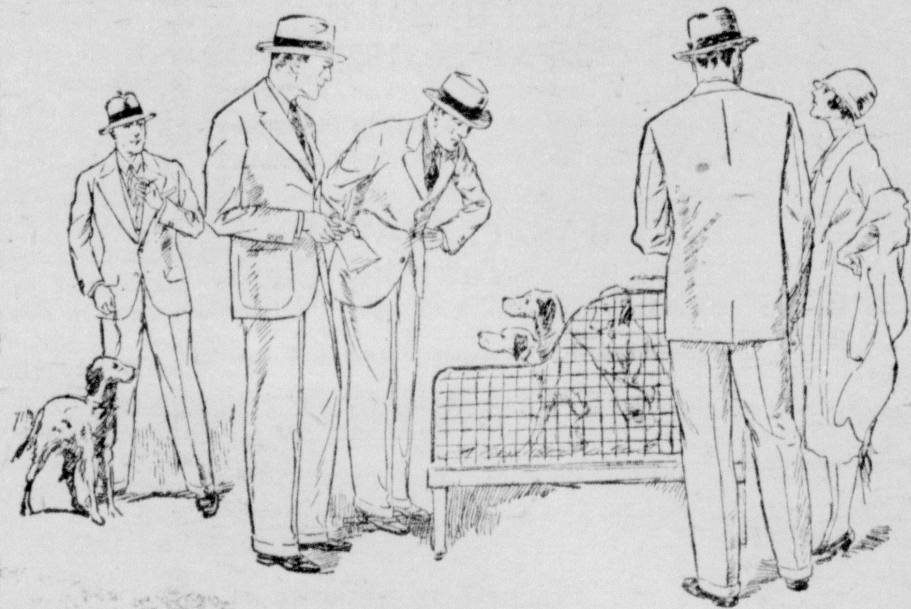

Will Be Preserved as Memorial to Pioneer.

In a dusty, narrow street, just off the plaza at Taos, N. M., is the original home of Kit Carson, a long low adobe which has recently been restored from a crumbling half ruin to the rude comfort of its original state. The simple house in this ancient Spanish village seems a fitting memorial to the man who lived in it. Carson was also a man of affairs, a pioneer leader, as fearless in the council chamber as he was on the trail. His shrewd diplomacy won over many an obstacle, and his deeds of daring were as spectacular as those of a motion picture hero of today. He was the friend of governors, army officers, Indians and settlers. There are pioneers in New Mexico to day whose eyes light at the mention of his name, and his generosity is still a tradition among Indians and Mexicans, says a correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor. As a scout, working lone-handed in the most trying conditions, Carson developed a remarkable resourcefulness, combining the Indian's outdoor craft with the white man's natural inheritance. Men of every sort came to the Taos home seeking Carson's advice and services. He carried government messages of the greatest importance, guided exploring parties, and helped poor Mexicans recover stolen property or perhaps wife or children who had been carried off by the Indians. His sense of justice was keen and he unsparingly championed the cause of the oppressed. Little most lovers of the open he liked also a home and a fire-side. His wife was a proud and beautiful Spanish woman who appreciated his heroic qualities. For years the adobe house was left untenanted. Vagrant Indians and Mexicans who remembered Carson as their friend claimed its hospitality. They built mesquite fires in the great fireplace, slept on the floors of the deserted rooms and went their way again. Sand storms picked holes in the walls and roof. Wandering cattle and burros crowded through the broken doors. Finally the women of Taos decided that the old house must be repaired. They gave musical programs and various other entertainments, and little by little they raised the necessary money. The foundation was rebuilt, a new roof put on and the adobe walls replastered by native workmen in the traditional fashion. Doors and windows were replaced with exact duplicates, and the hospitable fireplace again invites the friendly council.

DUSTY MILLER WILL LECTURE AT TARLTON

Noted Humorist Will Speak in Community Hall, June Seventeen.

Thurmen Miller, of Wilmington, Ohio, editor and publisher will lecture at Tarlton Community hall, Wednesday evening, June 17.

He has lectured in Circleville and at the Jackson township school, and those who have heard him vouch for an evening of rare entertainment, as he is a humorist of great talent.

The committee found June 17 is the only date open until September, so his lectures must be worth while to be in such demand; and when we are told that he receives as much as $250 and $300 an evening in large cities, the people of Tarlton and vicinity feel flattered to know that he is coming to their village in response to an invitation from the committee and in behalf of the Community club.

The admission charge is 25 cents and ten cents extra for reserved seat. The regular business meeting of the club will be on Tuesday evening, June 6.

A good attendance of the members and all others is urged for both these meetings.

Do not miss the opportunity for a good hearty laugh.

Perhaps he will tell us why he signs himself "Dusty Miller."

The people of this city were so well pleased with Mr. Miller's talk at the Rotary club meeting, that many will probably go from here to Tarlton to hear him again.
